The Grand Jury have not been able accurately to ascertain the number of prisoners who were permitted to come off the Island; exaggerated accounts have been given of the number. They believe the number to be about thirty. It is not the number of prisoners taken, but the fact that one prisoner was taken out of prison by public officers, for such a purpose, which should shock the moral sense of the community.

The examination also shows that other persons left the Island that day—some on a raft, and some in a boat. Those who escaped on a raft were two notorious violators of the laws, who were known by reputation to one of the keepers of the prison, as the associates of abandonad women and panel thieves, who had been convicted at the General Sessions of an assault and battery on Police Officers stationed before the houses of these felous to put persons on their guard against entering the dens of infamy and plunder. One of these prisoners had altempted to escape heretofore.

These men had, at the intercession of one of the keepers, who had heard of the infamous conduct of one of these prisoners, been taken from the quarries, given light work to perform; although the usual punishment of prisoners who escape, is to place a ball and world was a manufer to be seen a late and the least of President and Professor who escape heretofore.

They are satisfied that some of the officers in the employment of the Corporation of this City, receiving their compensation from the Public Treasury, planned and executed the attempt to use gangs of felons to pollute the Ballot Boxes.

The Grand Jury have come to the conclusion that there are persons now employed by the Corporation who aided and abetted in the escape of prisoners convicted by the tribunals of this State.

The testimony produced shows that some of the officers employed on Blackwell's Island made arrangements to throw into the Ninth and Fourteenth Wards of this City a number of the convicts, for the purpose of voting.

It would not make the Cubinet exerted a secret influence for the defeat of Wright. It winds up a column of twattle with this paragraph:

"We cannot drop this subject without saying, in the frankest and most respectful manner, that if our political friends go on in this way, idly and ungenerously enspecting and quarrelling with each other; if they do not adopt a higher and a more magnanimous course of action—if they do not regard principle more, and men less—and pursue noble ends by noble means, the sky must lower, and we may be defeated by the Federal would on this occasion, so far deviate, as to propose one, and requested the gentlemen to fill their do not adopt a higher and a more magnanimous course of action—if they do not regard principle more, and men less—and pursue noble ends by noble means, the sky must lower, and we may be defeated by the Federal would relate to those victories, he said, stop, stop, genderne from Lexington.
